AMUSEMENTS.

BAKER & FARRON AT ENGLISH'S.

A fair house greeted Baker & Farron in "Max Muller" last night. The play is one that shows off the talents of the comedians to good advantage. Mr. Baker, in the dual role of "Max Muller" and "Emil Muller," the son, displayed his keen insight of the character he assumed. As the poor, persecuted old German he swayed the feelings of the audience in a wonderful manner, the house being hushed at times as with the stillness of death, and as the son he caused many a hearty laugh and loud applause at his funny gaiety and outrageous conduct. Mr. Farron, as "McGuinness," the rollicking but brave son of the said old, kept the audience in a continual roar of laughter. The play is sad, very sad at times, but the sadness gives way opportunely to bright sunshine at last. Baker and Farron appear at the matinee this afternoon and to-night, which ends the engagement. Those who have not seen them in their great specialties should not fail to go, as they are a great treat. Baker, in his character acting with songs representing the happy and brave Dutchman, and in his great change to black as the "Cullud Aunt," who is anxious not to omit saying "Howdy," and Farron, as the true and devoted "Son of Erin," and his great change to that of a lovely German fraulein, with songs, prominent and sparkling amongst which is "Who'll Buy My Strawberry?" which he sings with beautiful effect. The dresses he dons in the last act are beautiful samples of the dressmaker's art.

Another large and delighted audience witnessed the second performance of the charming French comedy, "Three Wives to One Husband," at the Grand Opera House last night, and it was again received with every manifestation of popular approval. "Three Wives to One Husband" is not very well named, and may prejudice by its title. It is not at all of the "Forbidden Fruit" order, for the husband is, in fact, a bachelor, and is only made to appear numerously married. Two irascible old uncles and two lively nephews are concerned. One of the nephews is threatened with dire consequences if he marries, and another is commanded under penalty to get married immediately. Out of this situation the necessary complications are hatched, in the first instance to shield the nephew who is ordered not to marry. The marriageable nephew presently has more of his share of wadded bliss than the law allows, but only by implication, and when the trick has been worked for all it is worth the entanglements are summarily smoothed out. It is a clever piece of its kind—not as funny as "Confusion," but genuinely amusing, and it is bristly and intelligently acted by Messrs. E. A. Southern, Rudolph H. Strong, Raymond Holmes, B. W. Wallace and J. Hunt, and Miss Mary Young, Miss Patricia Mrs. Annie Deland and Miss Elsie Gerome in the principal parts. Messrs. Strong, Wallace, Hunt and Holmes were especially good. There will be a low-priced ladies' and children's matinee this afternoon at 2, and final performance to night at 8.

Matinee to-day at English's.
Grand Opera House matinee to-day at 2.
"Hearts of Oak" at English's Opera House all of next week.

Mr. Charles B. Grist, representing Downing's "Tally-Ho" company, is in the city perfecting arrangements for its production here next week.

The talented young actor, Mr. Robert L. Downing, in Joaquin Miller's latest and best play, "Tally-Ho," will be the attraction at the Grand the first three nights of next week. Sale of seats opens this morning at the box-office.

Mr. James Fennessy, manager of Hauck's Opera House, Cincinnati, was in the city a short time yesterday. He succeeded in contracting with Manager George A. Dickson to produce McKelzie's operetta of the "Naked Queen" in Cincinnati in May.

The last three nights of next week the attraction at the Grand Opera House will be the great Wallack Theater, New York, success, "Victor Durand." This is Henry Gay Middleton's great play, about which the New York press recently went almost wild.

The Blue Museum continues to boom, and more people visit it every afternoon and evening than all the other places of amusement put together. The attractions in this curiosity hall and the theaterium are among the best of the season and please everybody. To-day will be "Children's day."

Miss Patricia, as the charming little French lady in the second act of "Three Wives to One Husband," invests the part, a small but difficult one, with a naivete and stich in innocence which is captivating to both male and female. She is a handsome lady and an accomplished actress.

Indiana Architect.

With the February edition, just received, the Indiana Architect and Builder, of Chicago, commences its fifth volume. This journal, which is the official organ of the Western Association of Architects, has rapidly increased in value and importance to the Western architect and the builder. Its typographical appearance leaves nothing to be desired, and its columns show that its place as the architectural authority of the West is well sustained. The current number contains an interesting selection of well-executed cuts of residences, churches, etc., showing perspective views and plans; valuable advice upon architectural subjects; a complete review of the past year's building in sixty-three Western cities; a full account of the formation of State Associations of Architects in Illinois and Iowa, with the report of that of Minnesota, and a call for a convention at St. Louis, and other valuable news matter. The publication can not fail to be a large factor in the advancement of architecture in the West, and is published in Chicago, by the Indiana Publishing Company.

SUICIDE BY SHOOTING.

Charles Deam Takes His Own Life With a Revolver—Cause, Despondency.

Charles Deam, 92 Plum street, was found yesterday morning at 10 o'clock, in his woodshed, dead. He had evidently committed suicide, using for the purpose and old-fashioned French pistol, and from the circumstances it is thought the deed took place about 6 o'clock. The pistol is one of the pattern which explodes by pressure on a pin in the side of the cartridge, and will carry a No. 38 ball. The muzzle had been placed against the abdomen, and death must have resulted almost instantly. Deceased was forty-six years of age and married.

It seems from what can be learned that Mr. Deam has been despondent for some time past. His wife was one of the Atkinson heirs of Hancock County. There was considerable trouble in the settlement of the estate, Mrs. Deam being a favorite with her deceased father, and having been generously remembered in the distribution of the estate. Last May a suit was filed by Frank Morrison for the other heirs against her, and she was compelled to come into court and answer under oath touching the matter. As a final compromise, and to avoid any further expense and trouble, she paid over $3,000 in settlement of the matter. On Thursday Mr. Deam purchased a lot on Plum street for $1,400. By the advice of his attorneys he refused to take certain other property which he had contemplated purchasing because the title was not perfect, and it is alleged that he was threatened with a suit for commission by the agent. This led him to remark to his wife that it looked as though he was always getting into trouble, but beyond this nothing was observed unusual in his demeanor. Some time ago when unusually depressed in spirits he proceeded to his wife that they both commit suicide. Mrs. Deam thinks he must have administered chloroform to her upon rising yesterday morning, as she did not awaken till about 10 o'clock. Her fears being aroused on finding that her husband had arisen, and that the doors were open, she called to him. She did not build she instituted a search, which resulted in the discovery that he was in the woodshed. She called Mrs. W. C. Day, a neighbor, who in turn called her husband. The latter went into the shed and found Mr. Deam was cold in death. A physician was called but it was too late. The coroner was notified and the body was removed for examination. Mr. Day testified before the coroner yesterday evening. It is presumed that Mr. Deam's mind had been unsettled by business troubles. The inquest will be continued.
